

ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT

Fun and Frolic... Lovers Far Into the Night

That's what they all said about Mrs. Drew's party Saturday night...

Mrs. Marshall Kimball and others had spent hours and hours decorating the beautiful rooms and the dining room...

When the guests arrived all still smiling were put aside and Mrs. Drew met them with open arms and smiles and kisses...

After witnessing its power to lift 2,500 pounds of dead weight directly above the ship...

Final tests made today at the Grant Park field by the helicopter...

The helicopter is built with two pairs of airplane wings superimposed one above the other...

His mysterious, hypnotic power carried a spell upon every one...

An open door seemed very welcome. But Jack O'Leary winked and blinked...

Some muttered at the rain, some chuckled at the ghosts but none dared resist his "Follow me"...

Let me hear the blues, I insist. Let me hear the blues, I insist...

Need we say they did? There were hundreds of chicken sandwiches, plates of coffee, dozens of tables...

FUL NIGHT

After all had eaten plentifully and were well tamped in the ribbons...

After the guests had said their adieus and departed into the night, they looked back to see Mrs. Drew...

Those who attended the party were Mrs. G. Christanson, Miss Esther Richards, Miss Nora Boland...

Street Skirts of Presses of Today

Shorter Garments Still Popular With Majority of Americans.

How many of you are asking for shorter skirts? For your number as against a fashion designer's? Ask a Kansas City star. And you are right in wish to dress in the way that shows you at your best. Short skirts are certainly for the American girl. His is to show them off, to demonstrate to the world that she is not only a modern member of the generation that now calls itself youthful.

Well, the fact is that your street skirts can be of all sorts of lengths and show as much of your lower extremities as you deem wise and fit. The fashions of smart street dresses and tailored suits are saying that ten inches and twelve inches are the most approved lengths, largely upon their weight and the general outlines of your individual figure.

All suits are being made short enough for walking, without any restrictions included in their slapping and making. And this is true whether they are parts of costume suits of tailored-made suits of street dresses or of frocks. The knee cutting for the length of skirts is all the same—they must be short and comfortable and good looking in proportion. They must be adjusted to the best uses and needs of the American girl.

Pin Stripes Feature an Interesting Frock

This winsome frock for business wear is sure to appeal to women. The model was recently displayed at a New York fashion exposition.

These gowns are taken from the period styles, and in order to keep them true to type they must be made to touch the ground or trail along, and no one has the least desire to interrupt the truthfulness of the design nor its relation to the period which has been its inspiration.

Full skirts are long, touching the floor all the way round their manifold widths, and whether they are edged with lace to make them transparent, or shown by the thickness of their stiff

Congress to Be Flooded With Oratory

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15—Congress is likely to be deluged by oratory on the subject of establishing trade relations with Russia at the coming session. Many members of both houses have been over during the month's search of first-hand information as to conditions, and they agree to amount the same way water and oil mix.

For example, announcement was made in New York by three members of congress of their conviction that such a treaty should be established and the statement was made in Washington about simultaneously by Representative Fred A. Steiwer (R-Ia.) that he was unalterably opposed to any negotiations with the present Russian government. The members who gave their views in New York were Senator Lusk (Rep., N. D.), Senator King (Dem., Utah), and Representative Freer (Rep., Wis.).

The latter call themselves a consulting and their work is not for the benefit of the government. They made this statement: "The commission is

"Invisible Government" at Washington

THE Washington lobby, its power, how it works, its influence in the framing and passage of legislation, and the story of its steady growth since it became, according to the late Dr. Joseph P. Kamp of the National Farmers Union, an "invisible" part of the government itself, is disclosed in a recently published book, "Invisible Government at Washington," written by the purpose of informing the farmers, as well as others who may be interested, what the author learned about things official in the course of a twenty-year residence in Washington as chief representative of the National Farmers Union.

This book is causing considerable comment in Washington. It is the first authoritative document yet published dealing with the lobby problem and it is without question the most outspoken criticism of the system as practiced.

"Nothing," says the writer, "is more of the best outside world labor speaks in Washington. It is a sport indulged in on the golf links, at the racquets, at private dinners, social functions, fancy dress balls, secret confabs, in fact, everywhere that officialdom preparing a bill report dealing with conditions in Russia. This involves the examination of accumulated data, many statements and documents, but the commission will be ready to report soon. We state, however, that in general terms the reports collected in Russia better than reported by many persons and favor that immediate steps be taken by the United States looking toward the re-establisment of trade relations between the two countries.

"I traveled extensively in Russia," Representative Dierkes said, "selected my own guides, sought no favors, and really tried to see the good side of that tremendous political figure which is now holding 120,000,000 people in subjection. I have completely changed my opinion and am quite convinced that any recognition of bolshevik Russia is only leading straight to a cause which sooner or later must fail."

Nearly a dozen other members have traveled extensively in Europe and may be expected to add their quota.

Big to Appear

According to the author there are three lobbies, the public and the private, and he adds: "The public lobby speaks more loudly, but the private lobby gets more substantial and more irresistible results."

He cites instances in which the private lobby made its force felt in an uncertain way. He charges that private lobbies make their influence count in the enactment of railroad laws, propositions to regulate the packing and the coal industry and various other matters of legislation. He also points out the victories of a public lobby, including the passage of the parcel post law, the defeat of the draftsmen's embargo, and the adoption of the constitution amendments for the submission to the people of the amendment providing for the direct election of United States senators.

Museum, All! Has No Pink-Headed Duck

DEER that rings like a bell, a deer that barks like a dog, the Malabar lantern monkey, which has a military organization, and the loris, which is described as the finest sporting animal in the world, are among the 450 specimens from India turned over to the American Museum of Natural History by H. K. Varnay of the Varnay-Faunthrop expedition.

But alas! The pink-headed duck was conspicuous by its absence. The pink-headed duck was really the main purpose of the scientists. They hunted the pink-headed duck through the jungles and swamps of Nepal, near the Himalayas, with the aid of a hundred thousand men, but didn't have a glimpse of a water fowl with a head of the right tint.

There are six stuffed pink-headed ducks in the British museum, but none elsewhere. This expedition was formed chiefly to provide the American Museum of Natural History with distinguished foreign hunters came to the conclusion that it was extinct. They swarmed through thicket and marsh with hundreds of tons of psychoderm and armies of natives, trying hundreds of varieties of water-birds which rose with strange squawks.

Davis Preparing New Immigration Bill

SECRETARY OF LABOR JAMES J. DAVIS, after spending the summer in Europe, is embodying the results of his study abroad, as well as of his previous studies, in the preparation of a new immigration bill, which he hopes to present to the next congress. He has made no official announcement of the nature of the bill, but he has talked in detail to the following effect:

"I recently told the chairman of the congressional immigration committee that if he had courage to put through a bill receiving immigration, that I would be a President with the courage to sign such a bill."

"We are faced with the necessity of determining our immigration policy, at present our immigration is controlled under the 3 per cent quota law. This law will expire on the last day of next June, and unless we write a new immigration law before that time we will have immigration without restriction."

"I have an immigration program based on three principles: 1. That every prospective immigrant before he leaves his native land, by this means we would make sure that the applicant was eligible for admission to the United States before he started on a 2,000-

Flowers as Decorative Feature and Joy-Giver

The joy that flowers can give is not a thing that has never been appreciated quite so thoroughly as it is now. The homes are few, indeed, where flowers do not appear fresh and lovely at such frequent intervals that they seem always present.

No longer is the vase of flowers confined to a formal bouquet for the dining room and a few blossoms for the breakfast table. Hall, parlor, entry, breakfast room and kitchen each has its place for flowers, which vie with those in the other rooms, of course. Flowers are seldom found at the same time, but they appear now and then in different rooms as inspiration to those who remain at home during the day and a happy reminder of the life of the day.

Along with this growing feeling for flowers as a decorative feature and joy-giver, has been discovered that the beauty of even the lowliest blossoms is greatly enhanced by selecting appropriate receptacles and by the proper arrangement and combination of the flowers that are used.

The worst sin one can commit in the selection of a vase is to use a vase that is not in keeping with the flowers that are to be placed in it.

Feathers are to be especially popular on hats. With quills spore parks with the new shagreened hats that are so attractive alternative. The latter type of pompadour is of dyed ostrich, and is most often seen on hats with melon crowns and rolling brims turned up in front.

Flowers as Decorative Feature and Joy-Giver

flower display is to crowd the blossoms tightly into some unattractive container. An over-dressed woman is as untidy as an over-dressed woman. It is best to cut on the opposite side, if such a thing is possible.

The clever use of a single flower or a few sprays goes a long way to make up for a scarcity of flowers, which but and apartment-house dwellers suffer from, unless fresh ones are bought constantly.

Warmth and Wool.

Woolen wool comforters have taken the place, to a great extent, of those made of down. These quilts are very warm and are a very light and variable price according to the proportion of wool used and also the character of the cover. But it is not necessary to buy these comforters in bulk as is cotton. The work of making them up is not at all difficult and takes very little time. Tuffing them is quite as practical as quilting and much simpler. One may, then, secure a very inexpensive and durable bed-cover.

Latest in Pumps.

The exclusive shops are showing black patent leather pumps, and they aren't a buckle or any other ornamentation. Smart dressers are buying them and they are wearing them with peach-colored stockings. Those who prefer the black hosiery are purchasing the very shrewdest type. Of course, the black stocking is the choice for very formal wear.

Daddy's Evening Family

The Sandwich Sisters were talking. "Of course," said Sandwich Sister One, "we come from a good old family."

"Not too old, though," said Sandwich Sister Two.

"So is," said Sandwich Sister One. "It's not really meant about our age the way you thought I meant it."

"To be sure you're as fresh as some of our relatives are. I do not mean that in a flattery way either. Some of our relatives are rotten when they're quite warm, but we've always saved a day as we cut better when made into sandwiches than."

"True," agreed Sandwich Sister Two.

"Yes, some slices of bread are eaten when they're fresh indeed, but as I said before, that isn't the way with us. But when I spoke at first of having come from a good old family I meant that Bread has always been thought of as a well and has had the pleasure of a good reputation for many and many a year."

"Bread has been called the staff of life, and of course that means we've done our share of life and lives and so forth and so on. Bread has been considered so necessary, so useful, so important. And while we're on the subject of Bread, let me tell you that the Bread family. Sometimes, as is the case with many worthy and noble things we become a little bit dull then a jar of jam alongside of a dish of jelly puts us back on the same friendly footing with people."

"You speak strangely," said Sandwich Sister Two. "For how can we be on the same footing with people when we have so few?" That is impossible."

"Oh, I see," said that as an expression," said Sandwich Sister One.

"When one speaks of being on the same friendly footing with people it doesn't mean that everyone is being put on their feet, you know. It means that everyone is feeling at ease with one another and happy and comfortable and so forth."

"Oh yes, oh yes," said Sandwich Sister Two.

"Well, there are a good many of us," said Sandwich Sister One.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Good health makes you nervous, irritable and maybe despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many need for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Elizabeth, N. J., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores—Advertisement.

Julius Has His Good Points

By AGNES JOHNSON

I think it was that great Chinese sage, Confucius, who long ago wrote about love that though its symptoms may vary, the effect is ubiquitous and eternal—something like that, my dear, that however he put it, the old guy said something.

Bedtime stories is older than radio, so you can take it from me that not all of you girls brought it. Which brings us to the kernel of our act, you might say.

You know the saying about old men going off over schlemmy frontiers; they call it love because it don't get any queer for some weeks, but he won't say nothing about what ails him. So remember, my Confucius, I decide he's in love, collar him an' make him respect.

Not only that, but he'll expect to love her this very day.

Poor Julius! Whenever I think of him an' his "affaire de coeur" with Gloria Dymon, I don't know whether to laugh or cry. It seems that he and this lady he's never seen, through the good offices of a matrimonial bureau, have been exchanging "sweet nothings" for some time, to the end that they agree to meet at the hotel which has the honor of havin' him an' me on its payroll, object—yes, you guessed it.

For Julius, with his black hair varnished, well back at the top, he wears on his upper lip, takes no mean photo.

True, Julius is a bit vain; thinks he's an ace with the radio, but he has his good points. Reader, write to each landlady you know. Of course I ain't sayin' how he looks nowadays when he finishes duffin', an' I start in makin' beds.

Anyways, the great moment had come as your neighbor at the "movies," knowin' you can't read, says to help you enjoy the show. If the obligin' person was to chuck at that moment, wouldn't you just wear yourself sick? Neither would I. But to get back to our lambkins.

"So the happy bride-to-be is comin' here to sign up with you?" says to Julius. "Bless you, my children. But he don't pay no attention; instead he's drivin' this time."

"Mary, he want you to stand here, an' I want you to stand here, see I just sayin'."

"I think I over, I stall, not seem my way clear, in case—'but never mind about that."

"Everything is fixed, Julius yawns on. 'We were countin' on this day for a long while, an' tonight—ah, tonight!'"

"Well, tonight . . ."

"Tonight I shall meet her. I shall see Gloria, Mary. I feel like I could fly—like I was a little bird with wings an' beautiful butterfly. O, capture, O, bliss!"

An' here to the same effect, which, seeing I ain't a bad sort, I'll spare you. Well, by an' by Gloria becomin' in sure enough, the picture of respectability, an' she's dressed to load she looks like she might be a foreign lecturer, a hoodlum's widow or a trick countess with a charge amount somewhere. An' that ain't all. She's convivia a couple a kids, a boy an' a girl. Of course I can see right away they're gonna be happy."

Then I take a look at the lady's map. Not so good; she ain't fadin' no none with her carred beauty. Also my quick brain tells me she musta made her debut when wax cylinders was the eagle's culture.

"Is that the lady?" I ask Julius. Julius points a very fancy, blinks an' the girls, like he just swallowed bad medicine. I pinch him to bring him to, for he was breathin' hard, like the millionaire who thought that the million sign wasn't meant for him an' heard the judge say 99 days instead of $50 fine, like he expected.

I guess I didn't know Julius—like I thought, for the way that yoke could stall would make a diver look like perpetual motion!

"Julius, I see you. Here up, an' don't look like you come from Slat's Theory."

"Eh?" he squeaks, absent like. Then he finds his voice.

"I ain't no cutter," says Julius. "but I protest she never told me about no kids. That wasn't in our contract. The deal is off."

"Them's strong words Julius."

"O, goodness!" he crows, like he was about to give up the ghost. "Mary, you gotta get me outa this. You just gotta." He was desperate. "Ain't I always been your friend? I ask you, ain't I?"

Ain't nature gran' though? Well, troubles is like hand, I find; ye don't have to make it, it just accumulates. So Julius he puts me on the arm, frettin' himself in his excitement, I suppose, an' says—

"There's a good girl." (Girls don't be took in by that sort of stuff; it's the old sawastar. Mary's the guy tried to smooch me for chow money that way.)

"That's Mary," Julius begs. "You dug your own grave. I give him a shove. 'Remember, friend powder never won old men an' her brood of chicks. I'll tell your friend's you done with your boots on, an' maybe the dog'll get together an' buy something nice an' appropriate to wear the spot where the great see."

Another look at him, an' honest I ain't got the heart to go on. I been playin' sure to grow up kids for years, an' seen an' understandin' it supposed to know a thing or two about what an' I got the right think, I agree to act an' enjoy. So I goes up to Julius an' says—

"Let's," I says, "the gentleman you was supposed to meet—"

"Supposed to meet?" she interrupts. "What do you mean? Has something happened to the great guy Julius?"

"Yes, what can you say when folks to put it that bad! Ain't it the ayvay's giggle, though? Hot diggedy do!"

"I'm glad to write to headquarters about this," means Julius, joinin' us.

"Oh, you don't really mean that?" crows Gloria, duffin' her hand big for something. "Cheater," she trots out the boy. "Give Julius a nice kiss. That's a III angel."

Now I ain't sayin' III angel has been coached or nothin' like that, but he seems to know his cue. Anyhow, before Julius knows it he is fastened with two shd' kisses, an' the ingratitude Julius responds by lookin' like he'd just been kicked.

"No, no, go way!" says Julius. He coughs and looks sheepish.

"I'm sorry you object to children," proceeds Gloria; "but about writin' to the bureau, really—"

She looks quick at him, an' the mystery of the last has been explained, as I get an' myself of red quilt—not just common log green, but a small volume of crisp yellow snarkers like I never seen no place before. They're my idea of silver snarkers, parlor snarkers, the book to yours. Well, it finally came about that respectability has played a lousin' game, an' decides to be sensible about it.

"Really, you mustn't write—"

She's toying with the magic paper like she was invitin' someone to come an' get it.

"Take it before she changes her mind," I whispered to Julius. "I'll give you half. Ain't I always been your friend?" Ain't I? Gloria turns to me say—

"My good woman," she says, "is there anything you can suggest?"

"I'm a witness he's been crossly deceived," I says, glad to oblige. "Something ought to be done about this."

By this time Julius had recovered his senses. "It ain't right," he says as he takes the money, an' I'm not duffin' what he means. "No, it ain't right."

So while Gloria an' her two progeny goes back to Kookin', Julius an' me cut the book. As I said before, Julius has his good points.

'HOUN' DWAG' OF THE SOUTH

Every Planter After the War Between the States Kept His Pack.

A writer, replying to a statement that southerners are not dog fanciers, says:

You quote from Irvin Cobb's "My Fannie" stories, in which he makes a character-istic remark of the southerner having lost a number of his pack. I never can seem to get a start on houn' dawg sport has not the least conception of the excitement and pleasure it contributed to the practiced huntsman.

On my father's plantation in Mississippi there were eleven hounds and six brothers in our family, each on his own hunting horse, to follow, sometimes through the entire night, those hounds over the hills and through valleys listening to their cry in but pursuit of the long-winded, feet-footed red fox. One who has never participated in such sport has not the least conception of the excitement and pleasure it contributed to the practiced huntsman.

The sport, however, entailing as it did great fatigue and the loss of an entire night's sleep, not to mention probable accidents to the rider and his steed, as the pursuit of the pack carried them through jungles, up and down steep hills, etc., did not appeal, as a rule, to one brought up in the counties of the "northern cities" and in the society of the "Boston bulls," whose police dogs, Irish terriers, etc., mentioned in your article. These were merely ornamental adjuncts to the household and were not expected to shed as a matter might be expected to treat a blue-eyed, rosy-checked, cooling baby. (That is, if there were no pet dogs about.)

Tomorrow.

The day after today has been variously defined, but it remained for four-year-old Lorraine to set it up properly. The other evening at the supper table, after designating a piece of pie, she was told by her mother that the world had to wait till tomorrow.

"Aw," she cried disconsolately, "I don't wanna wait till tomorrow."

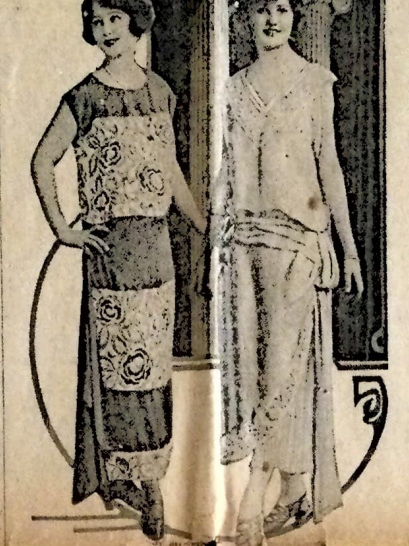

"But that's not long," protested the mother.

"Not long. It's the way the play, say prayers, but he had, make up, get dressed and break'fast."—New York Sun.

Dance Frocks Made of Silk; Tailored Dress of Poiret Twill

WHEN as in silk my lady wears, whether it be to the theater, to a dance, to a dinner, or any one of the many functions that require her to look her very best, the chances are that she will go in silks that fall in long straight lines from the shoulder to the ankle. The straight-line mode continues—it has not been out since it made its appearance several seasons ago. Such changes are as evident in current fashions as changes of detail and cut of style.

In the opinion of many style-wise dress designers, there are only two permissible variations from the straight line in the season's gowns. The bouffant skirt is shown, generally in dance frocks for debutantes, and draped skirts appear as a modification of the mode. Such a skirt is shown at the right in the illustration. In this model of silk crepe the skirt forms an overskirt draped high at the side and closed in a loop at the back.

The Influence of the Orient contributes its charm to the gown at the left. It is of green and white crepe de chine with the wide white bands and is placed also on the sleeves and the skirt. Small, round buttons and the crisp, sturdiness of this lace arrival. It will be hard to wear woman away from the classic lines that have been so well managed in the frock at the right. With the fashionable means at hand—plating and embroidery—the designer has turned out a simple and elegant model made of a smooth-faced cloth. It is a slip-over, with set-in sleeves, and under-sleeves of plaited gauze. Panels of the plating show in a long split in the skirt and embroidered with a conventional rose design.

"When she will, she will—and when she won't, she won't" is verified by the last frocks to make their appearance. They establish certain ventures of the stylized as accepted fashion and emphasize that women are still devoted to order, but more or less straight lines. Nevertheless there is a demand for

Build Caves Under Homes Natives Are Too Polite

Arabians Construct Underground Chambers in the Holy City of Nejeff—Refuge for Criminals.

Papuan Unable to Carry Friend Across Kills Him Because He Did Not Wish to Be Rude.

Out in the Arabian desert, five days by caravan from Bagdad, stands the holy city of Nejeff, and in the whole of the town of almost 100,000 persons there is hardly a house with windows.

Also, beneath many homes are immense caves, hewn out of the limestone that underlies the desert round about. Many of these caves are built one room below the other, some of the lower apartments being 100 feet below the street level.

These underground chambers are reached by winding stairways, walled from the floor. They were originally built to provide a refuge from the intense heat of midsummer, but in many instances they have now become a refuge for Arab criminals and robbers who dwell at Nejeff and prey on the caravans and pilgrims.

Nejeff itself is a great ancient city, and with 50,000 inhabitants, it derives from Persia and Turkestan make the journey to the holy Nejeff, bringing with them the salted and dried bodies of their dead for use in sacred soil outside the city walls. Here a vast city of tombs has grown up.—Detroit News.

No matter how careful a woman may be, she generally loses her name at the marriage altar.

People like to spend money. That is chiefly how other people become rich.

Related to the weakness which induces the Papuan native to lie in order to honor the Europeans in the courtyard which he often displays on the most unexpected occasions.

You may tell the same story two or three times to a Papuan, but he will laugh just as heartily as express just the same astonishment the last time as the first. No hint will escape him that he has heard the story before.

And even in the crimes which he not infrequently commits—mostly crimes of violence—he is not always forgetful of the rules of politeness.

"He wanted me to carry him across the water," said a prisoner who was charged with unloading another native whom he had met and done to death on the bank of a river, "but he took every care to make a good job of it, so I thought that the best way out of the difficulty was to kill him."

Congress, too, was the explanation given to me by some natives of the mountains inland of Tico, who were charged with attacking a police patrol, "they had never seen policemen before," they said, and we did not know what they were. If we had thought for a moment," they added, "that you attached any importance to these persons, we certainly would not have thrown spears at them. We did not think that they were my good."

"A child's among ye babies' naps / And folk-ke 'll print it"

Last Saturday evening eight anxious folk from Chicago, surprised Mrs. J. N. Johnson, the occasion being her birthday. The folks made merry with games and songs until an early hour and everyone had a wonderful time. Most of the guests stayed until Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Abbott and family left Thursday to take up their living in a new home in Riverside.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Fint attended the Chicago-Hinos football game and some continuing at Urbana last week end.

Dick Reynolds spent Sunday with his friends Wallace Johnson of Chicago, returning Monday morning. Mrs. Wava Platt and sister, Mrs. May Gillespie after a delightful visit with Mrs. Platt's daughter, Mrs. Harold Grey, returned last week to their home in Niles, Michigan.

Mrs. Williams has been quite ill at her home on Ash near Main street.

Mr. A. C. Marotta returned last week from San Francisco where he went as delegate to the National Convention of the American Legion.

Mrs. Iona Wilcox returned Friday from Warsaw, Indiana where she attended the funeral of her father-in-law, Mr. Wilcox. Mr. Will Wilcox accompanied his father's body here from Kansas City where the death occurred.

Mr. L. A. Crittendon of Chicago was a business caller here on Tuesday.

Mrs. W. O. Morton is visiting in Irvine Park at the home of her son, Mr. W. P. Morton and family.

Mrs. M. P. Sheehan of West Chicago was a Thursday visitor at the home of Mrs. J. Smith on Finley Road and Maple street.

Two brothers of Rev. Frank Hancock, with their father, arrived from England and expect to make Lombard their home.

Mr. W. K. Harrison of Chicago was a business caller here on Tuesday.

Mrs. Doyle of Chicago and Mrs. Shiff of West Elmhurst were Wednesday visitors at the home of Mrs. Lott Wilcox.

Train service was delayed for some time Thursday morning after 9:30 o'clock, a car being derailed off the O. and N. W. R. tracks a short way west of Lombard station.

Mrs. Shirley Beach spent Thursday in Chicago visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis McDonough of Seattle, Washington announce the arrival of a daughter on October 24th. The mother before her marriage was Miss Margaret Campbell of Lombard. Her Mr. and Mrs. McDonough were residents of Lombard before their marriage. A happy occasion of Baby McDonough's birthday is that of the same date as her maternal grandfather, Dr. L. M. Campbell of Sierra Madre, California.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mayer and Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hammerich motored last Saturday to Champaign to attend the Illinois-Chicago football game.

Mr. Swain and family of Chicago moved last Saturday into the flat vacated by Dr. C. F. Glasener. The Swain family will be remembered as having been former residents of Lombard.

Mr. R. O. Nys and family spent Sunday in Milton Park with his cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Peters.

The Baby Friendly Workers will meet next Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 14th at the home of Mrs. Charles Bond on Elizabeth near Main street. Work will begin at one-thirty o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Marion Hammerich entertained a party of friends Saturday evening at their home on Madison Road.

Mrs. Heilheck of Elmhurst was a Monday visitor at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. F. Hammerich.

Mrs. H. S. Brown has been called all at the home of her mother, Mrs. E. W. Johnson.

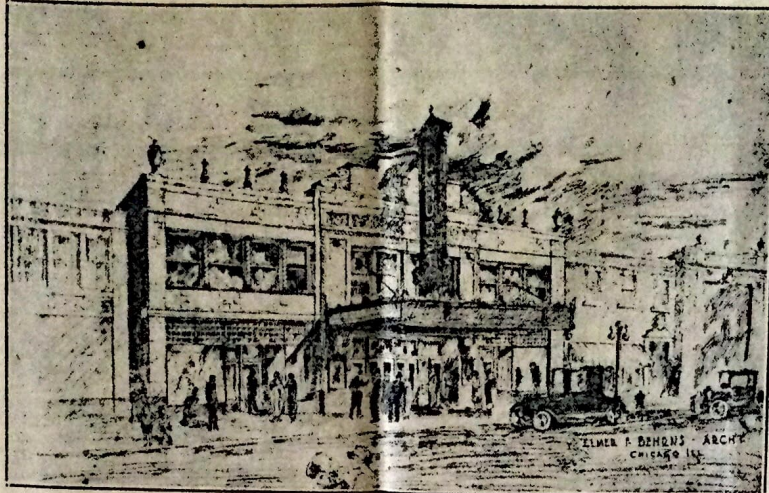

The First Church has extended a cordial invitation to the American Legion and Auxiliary to be invited, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, Nov. 14th, Armistice Day. Members of both organizations will attend in a body.

Mrs. L. H. Webb is visiting relatives in Canada. Upon her return she will go by way of Massachusetts to visit her son Ralph who is a student at Williams College.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Meen, Ted and Sister Clavin and Mr. Philip Gleason attended the Illinois-Chicago game.

Mrs. Add Manning entertained the Mrs. Villager's Wednesday evening at her home on North Main street.

Elmhurst To Have Largest Movie Theatre In County

ELMER F. BEHRNS - ARCHT. CHICAGO, ILL.

Frank W. Moureau of Elmhurst, who negotiated the transaction, assures us that this theatre will be the finest one outside of Chicago. The architecture, both interior and exterior, is to be Spanish. He said Mr. Moureau, "and the exterior will be faced with polished terra cotta. The lobby is to be finished with marble and cane stone, while the auditorium will have a large decorative plaster dome equipped with dimmer control lighting. The general effect of the entire interior will be similar to that of the new Chicago theatre."

Excavation is already completed for the largest moving picture house in DuPage county, and the opening of the Elmhurst playhouse is expected to take place by the first of March, 1924. Elmer F. Behrns of Chicago is the architect, and he is planning the building for Vincent T. Lynch and George Kappas, who already own five moving picture theatres in Chicago. The new Elmhurst Theatre will be located on North York street just north of Schiller street at Elmhurst, Illinois. The cost will be $165,000. The seating capacity is 1,600, and a $20,000 pipe organ will add to the enjoyment of the patrons.

HOME AT PRINCE CROSSING WILL RECEIVE ABOUT $2,500

Table listing names and amounts collected for the Home for Convalescent Children at Prince Crossing. Includes names like Wagoner, Naperville, Glen Ellyn, Elmhurst, etc.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

The Novelty Fair last Saturday at Wheaton was a great success—quite a tidy sum being realized for the League. The various committees wish to express their gratitude to the many counts and other individuals who helped to make the fair so worthwhile. The general public will be interested to know that a pair of ginger-snaps put up by Miss Lottie Holman O'Neill brought seventy cents at auction, at the very end of the auction sale, when nearly all money was spent. There were many bargains at the booth, and the lunch was especially attractive. Mrs. Iona M. Kopper gave a group of some most pleasing little silver snuff boxes. Mrs. Lottie Holman, both of Glen Ellyn, Mrs. Misses Marjory Kasse, two of the best illustrated needle art and certified talent as a reader. The next meeting will be at City Hall, Wheaton, on Wednesday Nov. 14, and will be a citizenship class, conducted by Mrs. A. Seton Berens.

Another victory for the Illinois women, their management, Miss Mary C. Bartelme, was elected Tuesday judge of the Circuit court of Cook county. The voters believe she is the best the city has. A remarkable feat. Democratic opponents had about 600 votes, but fell to a fraction in the county totals that gave her a net plurality of 12,012 votes. The total vote was 29,110 for Miss Bartelme and 192,982 for Normandy.

MARY BARTELME FIRST JUDGE IN ILLINOIS COURTS

It is the first time Illinois has elected a woman to a court of such high jurisdiction. Last night as the returns came in they revealed recollections of the historic night were soon when Mrs. Catherine Wash, McCulloch first cracked the ice by winning election as justice of the peace in Evanston. Miss Bartelme's triumph in essence and substance was won by a woman's involvement in the judicial campaign.

Armistice Day

Five years after the world's great catastrophe, America pays homage to the 70,000 men who fell upon the fields of honor. Today this great nation, dedicated to the principles of liberty, celebrates this momentous event of the greatest victory of arms in history.

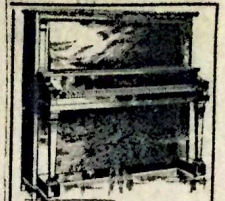

Five years have passed—and wounds of the bitterest struggle of all mankind are gradually healing. Since that eventful day of 1918 the nations of the earth have taken a decided step toward universal peace by naval disarmament. Let us rejoice and give blessing.

THE GIRL OF THE DESERT

By Randall Parrish

Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co.

IN THE TOOLS

"You—you are the Justice from Kansas!" she asked dubitantly. "That's who I am, Justice Connelley Garret, as at your service."

"And you were asked to come out here to marry me to Bob Meager?"

"Maybe so, if you are the girl," she said. "I'm Deborah Meredith. I want to appeal to you, Judge Garret, as an officer of the law, to refuse to perform this marriage."

"Let me see your name," she said. "It's all straight enough. First, the name here has all made out right with your name on it."

"That is just the name on it," she said. "I was procured without your knowledge, and I refuse to consent to it. I have never agreed to marry Bob Meager. I am here to save my throat and I appeal you for protection."

Does Judge Garret protest here? Hardly. He merely protested with his eyes. He merely looked at the girl and then at the hated Meager and then at the girl. He merely looked at the girl and then at the hated Meager and then at the girl. He merely looked at the girl and then at the hated Meager and then at the girl.

So the possibilities of all sorts of excitement that this strange story by Randall Parrish has this author a thrilling tale. This is one of his most thrilling.

CHAPTER I

The Choice It was a wonderful thing to be twenty-three, full of hope and ambition, and in the wide-out-door; more wonderful still to possess the means to do it. He was in the hospital of France six months of that time just behind the American fighting line. She, the girl, was not thinking of the then as she sat there alone in the city of the desert, gazing silently at across the dull leagues of desert to where a distant blue range of mountains cut off the view from the valley. She was a white arching over all hung the clear, sunny sky, slowly turning to gray.

When compared that sickness with the one that would not die—Germany, when the ground was yet red with the blood of sacrificed manhood. Her heart ached still with the sad memory of that time, when the dull, heart of suffering. But this mood had also passed away, and now, although her eyes were still upon that memory, she was not thinking of it. She had centered upon the girl, through the dull wonderment at the strange situation surrounding her. Why had she listened to the plea of old Tom Meager back there in the desert, and finally, partially true pity, partially from that new love of adventure engendered within her by service across the water, agreed to come west with him? Of course, she never had dreamed that it would really be like this.

On this vast isolated ranch along the southern border with the desert stretching away on every side from this little oasis of water and grass, Tom Meager had never told the whole story; he had said only the loneliness of his sick wife, that she had of regaining health, with proper nursing and care; the rare beauty of the summer, the wonderful glow of the cool days; the freedom, the wild, free existence of the range, filled with excitement and a dash of danger. It all had appealed to her strangely, and she had accepted the environment, the escape from the humdrum life of the Marine hospital. The pay was good, the opportunity excellent, and she had said "yes" without fully realizing then what it all meant.

But she realized now. Those first few weeks had been glorious indeed. She found everything new, attractive, thronged with romance and color. She liked Mrs. Meager, and discovered her task to be an easy one, her time largely at her own disposal. But it was lonely, terribly lonely; and, after those first few weeks, she began to occur to break the dull monotony. It was sixty miles over a half-obliterated desert trail to the nearest town, that little town, with a general store and a cattle corral, and the link between there and the civilization she had left to the eastward were the glistering rails of the railroad.

Day by day, week following week, she saw the same faces, heard the same voices. Riders from the outer range came in with their reports, bringing the tales of Mexican raiders, and she had said "yes" without fully realizing then what it all meant.

But it was lonely, terribly lonely; and, after those first few weeks, she began to occur to break the dull monotony. It was sixty miles over a half-obliterated desert trail to the nearest town, that little town, with a general store and a cattle corral, and the link between there and the civilization she had left to the eastward were the glistering rails of the railroad.

Day by day, week following week, she saw the same faces, heard the same voices. Riders from the outer range came in with their reports, bringing the tales of Mexican raiders, and she had said "yes" without fully realizing then what it all meant.

But she realized now. Those first few weeks had been glorious indeed. She found everything new, attractive, thronged with romance and color. She liked Mrs. Meager, and discovered her task to be an easy one, her time largely at her own disposal. But it was lonely, terribly lonely; and, after those first few weeks, she began to occur to break the dull monotony. It was sixty miles over a half-obliterated desert trail to the nearest town, that little town, with a general store and a cattle corral, and the link between there and the civilization she had left to the eastward were the glistering rails of the railroad.

death. Riding home alone from Nogales at night, in the dark of November, his horse slipped and fell, and Meager lay there on the rock motionless. A packer found his body the next day, and brought it on to the ranch. In some way the message of the old man's passing crossed the border line down for into old Mexico, until it reached the ears of his son, God alone knows where. Three days after the burial this wanderer of many years returned, drove his saddle horse into the corral and assumed control. Whoever might be his legal right, there was now no one to oppose his bold assumption of authority or management. The widow lay helpless on her bed; she was not the boy's mother, and he never so much as crossed the threshold of her room. If there had been a will, no one searched for it, or made inquiries. By sheer force and audacity Bob Meager took command, asking permission of no one.

For some days after his arrival the girl did not even encounter this new master. From down to dark he was in the saddle, familiarizing himself with every detail of his new possessions. She had no desire to meet him for long ago his story had been told to her—not by old Tom, who never spoke his son's name, or the patient, invalid wife, but by other, long in the Meager service, glad now of an opportunity to gossip with a stranger. It was a story of brutal shame, of base ingratitude, verging on crime; of sudden disappearances; of vague rumors floating here and there, here, hearing the tale of a wild, respectable life. To her Bob Meager had become the synonym of all that was evil in this world.

Yet now, through some strange play of fate, he was here and she was left helplessly in his power, under his orders, wholly dependent on him for employment. The thought was almost a relief. "Who are you?" he asked gruffly.

"I'm Mrs. Meager," she said. "I'm Deborah Meredith."

"What do you want?" he asked. "I want to see you."

"I want to see you," she said. "I want to see you."

"I want to see you," she said. "I want to see you."

this, but for her own personal suspicion. Old Tom Meager would never employ a Mexican on the place, nor trust them; but now, one by one, the old hands disappeared, while warily-stanced riders appeared mysteriously to take their place. Within six days the transformation was practically complete, and Bob Meager was surrounded by those of his own kind. Creatures of his will, devils of that he knew best. This change was to Deborah's mind, and she was not increased her fear, and rendered more difficult any possibility of escape. The walls closed her more tightly in. What did this new plan to do with her? The question could not be answered; she could only wait fearfully for his actions to make reply. Yet it must be evil; she could conceive because aware of Bob Meager's heart, she was not even conscious of her more immediate surroundings, remaining totally oblivious to the solitary horseman, approaching along the barely discernible trail of the desert. The horse was moving slowly, with wearily drooping head, and on the hard-bitten and the horse made no noise, but she could distinguish her. It was on the farther edge of the chapparal that the horseman suddenly perceived that the girl, white still showing conspicuous in the purple light, and quickly held up his pony. She had evidently neither seen nor heard his approach, and he swung slowly over the animal's head, before advancing toward her on foot. It was not until he had reached within a very few yards of her position that Deborah became aware of some presence near, and arose instantly to her feet, facing him in sudden alarm. It was too late then to flee; the man blocked the only path available.

"Frightened you, didn't it?" he asked carelessly, slipping a weed with his quirt, but with searching eyes in her face. "You must have been in some dreadful fix, huh?"

"I was thinking," she answered, "of this outfit in the valley, but as I'm instantly determining to tell the truth, I don't care if you know I'm lying with me. I—I cannot continue to bear this."

"Why, they are not so bad, are they?" he asked provokingly, but making no effort to advance. "This is a fine ranch to which you came voluntarily. I have not cut down your wages, and the food and all that, is just as good. Do you mean you don't like it here any longer?"

"I don't care any longer," she said. "I don't care any longer."

Mothers Advise Their Daughters to Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Keep Them in Health

A Mother's Advice Prevents Operation
"Corona, N. Y." "I had a terrible pain in my left side and had to go to bed every night. Doctor had told me I must be operated on, but I do not believe in the knife and would rather suffer than go through it. My mother also did not believe in it and she made me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because it had helped her. It has also helped me for I am better and able to do all my work. I recommend your medicine and give you permission to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. SCHUCH, 74, 11 S. Railroad Avenue, Corona, N. Y.

For nearly fifty years it has been used by women of all ages, and these women know its great value. Let it help your daughter and yourself.

A Sickly Child
Maibonington, Pa.—"I would like to say a few words about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About a year ago I thought it would be necessary for me to take my daughter out of school. She was losing weight, was nervous, and when she would come home from school she would drop into a chair and cry, and say, 'Mamma, I don't believe I can go to school another day.' We accumulated a number of good habits, too, but we don't notice those as much.

Properly Prepare Fowls for Holiday Marketing

While November is generally regarded as turkey month, there is also a strong demand for fowls of all kinds and good prices can be realized for almost any kind if they are properly prepared for market.

Feather should be fastened quickly to the backbone. It should be remembered that careful grooming of poultry pays. All fowls should be scalded according to age and condition, color and shanks. Never mix good and poor stock in shipping to market, as the poor birds always reduce the value of the lot. In other words, uniformity of appearance adds greatly to market value.

Feathers should be fastened quickly to the tender and juicy. If the fowls have been kept in good condition during the summer and fall, two weeks of liberal feeding should put them in better condition for marketing. After they have commenced to fatten give them all that can eat four or five times a day.

Turkeys ought not to be confined for any length of time, but for just a short time prior to marketing. If fed liberally while they have a few run, they can be put in condition for marketing within ten days.

This is the time of year when the chicken flock should be culled closely. The undesirable birds will bring the better prices than later, and it is better throughout the winter will only be an expense and a detriment to the rest of the flock.

Uniformity in Fowls Is of Utmost Importance

For those who are breeding standard fowls it is essential that they look up for type in the first place, and not allow their flock to run to the dogs in this particular, as some we have seen recently.

What is a Rhode Island Red good for in the breeding yard if he has a short Wyandotte of Cochon back on him? You might just as well put him in the pot and be done with him, for he is worth more there than anywhere else. Then there is the Orpington standing upon shanks almost like a goose. He is a good variety, but one that is all you can say about him. No matter what breed you are attempting to breed or handle, you should be sure that the bird you are breeding is in line with the breed you are trying to handle. If you find that you do not have that kind, better get rid of it, and get the right kind before you waste any more valuable time in experiments. Study the type that you wish to make a good one of your kind, and get in line with it. Get the best color, of course, that is consistent with the right type, but get type at any cost first. Be sure you know your breed or variety as that is of the most importance. Work intelligently at all times, and you will be surprised how well things will go along.

Dealers Can Stop Much of Waste in Egg Supply

How the dealer can stop the waste in eggs is pointed out on a poster recently issued by the extension service of Colorado Agricultural College, in line with a campaign for better quality. Dealers can help by:

- Encouraging production of infertile eggs by paying more for them.
- Feeding eggs only in good cases, on the new flats and fillers.
- Placing excelsior pads on top and bottom of each case and not using any straw.
- Keeping eggs in cool, dry place, away from kerosene and never allowing a shipment to stand in the sun.
- Shipping at least once every other day, because holding eggs in temperature above 60 degrees causes rapid deterioration.

Dried Why Fed Laying Hens on Government Farm

New uses for dried whey are being revealed by a series of investigations by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Four pounds of crude sugar and 1 1/2 pounds of dried whey containing about 30 per cent of albumin were obtained from 100 pounds of whey. The dried whey was added to a laboratory making baby food, at a price justifying a satisfactory return for the whey.

Dried whey and dried buttermilk are being fed experimentally to laying hens at one of the department farms. In the first half of the twelve-month experiment the pen of hens receiving dried whey produced eggs at a rate comparing favorably with results obtained with other kinds of feeds.

Get Maximum Production of Eggs During Winter

If you are planning to add new pullets to your laying pens get them as soon as possible, in order to get the maximum production of eggs this winter. Just as a cow's milk production is increased by moving her from one place to another during her rutting, laying is delayed when pullets are disturbed by moving them from one farm to another or from their regular quarters. Disturbing pullets also retards growth.

126,000 Miles of Cloth for Cement Sacks

To keep cement moving from the mills to the many building jobs always under way, cement manufacturers require an astonishing quantity of sacks.

This year the industry has considerably more than 225,000,000 sacks. These represent enough cotton cloth to make a skirt for every woman and girl in the United States—126,000 miles of 30-inch fabric. Even a moderate sized mill which ships say 1,000,000 barrels a year must have 2,000,000 or so sacks.

When a customer returns a sack he gets credit for it, if it is usable or repairable. The convenient returnable sack means that each plant has to have large departments where men and women sew, sort, clean and count sacks continuously. This work alone costs the industry nearly $1,250,000 a year.

And cement manufacturers keep increasing their sack inventories so that they can ship promptly. Last year they purchased a total of more than 100,000,000 new cotton sacks. For replacements alone over 50,000,000 were needed; for increased supplies over 30,000,000. In addition over 18,000,000 paper bags were used representing 7,000,000 pounds of paper.

This problem of containers causes a large and steadily growing investment by the portland cement industry.

DEATH OF JUDGE IRWIN IN ELGIN

Last Sunday—Circuit Judge Victim of Pneumonia—Wednesday—His Brilliant Career—Resolutions of Respect

Statement of Judge members of various bar associations and scores of latter friends attended the funeral services at Circuit Judge Clinton F. Irwin, which were held from the Elgin Universalist church Wednesday afternoon at a 2 o'clock.

In addition to representatives from bar associations in the 16th judicial circuit, Roger Sherman, president of the Illinois Bar association, appointed the following committee to attend the rites:

Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe, Circuit Judge Maxine Shuster, City Court Judge Edward M. Manice, Assistant State Attorney Roy M. Phillips, State Representative Frank A. McCarthy, City Judge Frank E. Shopen and Attorneys Glenn E. Beverly, Robert S. Lean, DeLoe, C. E. Frank, W. Joslyn and Irving M. Weston.

Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Frank D. Adams, former pastor of the Elgin Universalist church.

Ritual was made in the Irwin family plot at Hill City cemetery, Elgin, beside the grave of a son, Henry Irwin, who died 17 years ago.

Death Follows Pneumonia

Circuit Judge Clinton F. Irwin, 70 years old, died at his home in Elgin Sunday morning at 11:15 o'clock following an attack of pneumonia.

A few weeks ago while on the bench at the court house in Geneva, Judge Irwin was taken suddenly ill. He was removed to his home at 623 Chicago street, Elgin, where for ten days he hovered between life and death.

He was born in Franklin Grove, Illinois, New Years day, 1836, coming to Elgin in 1872 where he became the law partner of Robert E. Lean.

In 1860 he married a sister of his partner, Julia Helen Egan—just 42 years ago the day he died. He then made his home in Elgin and acted as attorney for the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad company.

Three years later he was made corporation counsel at Elgin under Charles Wayne, then mayor.

In 1886 he "stamped" the state of Illinois, Missouri and Indiana in the interest of William McKinley, campaign president.

In appreciation of his efforts President McKinley appointed Judge Irwin associate justice of the supreme court of Oklahoma in 1890. The appointment was one of the judge's most valued possessions. It had been framed in the study of his magnificent home.

Following the assassination of President McKinley, Judge Irwin was reappointed to his position in Oklahoma by President Theodore Roosevelt. After holding the judgeship there for several years, the judge returned with his family to Elgin where he again took up the practice of law in 1908.

His legal practice then kept him occupied for five years.

Elected to Bench

In 1912 following the death of Henry B. Willis, who was killed in a railroad accident, Judge Irwin was elected to the circuit court bench. He has held that position to date.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mildred and Betsy, and a son, Clinton F. Irwin, junior, now a practicing attorney in Elgin.

Resolutions of Respect

Owing to the death of the Hon. Clinton F. Irwin, judge of the 16th Judicial Circuit, no business of any kind was transacted in the Circuit Court at Wheaton Monday and all cases were continued until Thursday, Nov. 8, at 10 o'clock A. M. A meeting was called and a committee appointed to draft resolutions on the death of Judge Irwin, consisting of Judge S. L. Kathie, Samuel Howe, F. W. Ledlie, Jos. A. Roush and G. H. Bunge. The resolutions were presented by the court and ordered made a part of the record of the record of the Court. A copy of said resolutions is appended:

Whereas, the infinite Power, which presides over the destinies of all mankind has removed from his duties and honors, amongst us, by death, the Honorable CLINTON F. IRWIN, Judge of the 16th Judicial Circuit of the State of Illinois, and

Whereas, by his death the family of the said Judge, Clinton F. Irwin, has lost a faithful husband and industrious father, and

Whereas, the 16th Judicial Circuit has lost a fearless, able, competent and conscientious Judge; and

Whereas the community has lost a patriotic, honored and respected citizen, and

Whereas the Bar of DuPage County has lost an efficient member and able co-worker,

IT IS HEREBY BE IT RESOLVED, by the members of the Bar of DuPage County, in special meeting assembled, that we do hereby extend to the grieving widow and family of said deceased our deepest sympathy and that the names of these representatives be so entered.

RESOLVED that we do hereby express our admiration and appreciation of his high character of the deceased and the faithful and efficient services rendered by him in the discharge of his duties as a Judge of this Circuit, and be it further

RESOLVED that these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Circuit Court of DuPage County and of this Association and that a copy thereof be forwarded to the widow of the late Judge Irwin, and that a copy thereof be furnished to the press by the Secretary of this Association.

Special Election Will Be Called

The vacancy on the circuit court bench caused by the death of Judge C. F. Irwin, will be filled at a special election called by the governor. There is no specific time after the vacancy is created for the election to be called. The governor will use his discretion in fixing the date.

Judge Irwin had three and one-half years to serve to complete his term. At the special election the judge will be elected, only to fill out the term. Nominations for the judicial position will be made by a convention in which delegates will be selected by the county central committees of the political parties in each county.

There are four counties in the judicial district, Kane, DePage, DeKalb and Kendall. The district has three judges. M. Stouser of DuPage county and Judge William J. Fulton of DeKalb county. Judge Irwin was from Kane county.

A special judicial election was held in this district last spring when Judge William J. Fulton was selected to fill the vacancy caused by the elevation of Judge Adam C. Cliffe to the federal bench.

Put Off Furnace Time—

It takes a barrel of coal to start your furnace—and then the weather warms up.

It only takes one barrel to start a Radiant Fire and it goes out the instant you cease to need it. It's odorless, ashless, smokeless and dustless. And it's as cheery as sunshine.

Come in and let us talk to you about it
